Catalog Description: Independent study taken in conjunction with another undergraduate course as part of the student's approved Interdisciplinary Honors program.

Prerequisite(s):

Projected Enrollment:
Year 1 - 5 Year 2 - 10 Year 3 - 15 Year 4 - 20

Required course for students in: Interdisciplinary Honors

Statement of need and justification based on assessment results of student learning outcomes: The Interdisciplinary Honors program requires a sequence of four related undergraduate courses, each of which will be taken in conjunction with this one-hour Interdisciplinary Honors Independent study course. Each of the four courses must be approved by the Honors College, and it is assumed that the student will work with the same faculty member for all four of these independent study courses, as well as for the required Honors Interdisciplinary Honors capstone course. The independent study experiences will allow the student to grow in greater depth into the subject matter of the affiliated course, and to make connections between the four courses in the approved Honors Interdisciplinary sequence. In the Interdisciplinary Honors capstone course, the student will have the opportunity to complete one or more projects designed to show evidence of breadth and depth of learning about the themes studied throughout the interdisciplinary sequence, and the ability to synthesize the various issues covered in a coherent narrative.

Textbook(s): [Sample textbook for Interdisciplinary Honors independent study taken in conjunction with POSC 4370, American Constitutional Law: Rights and Liberties] -- additional books for HON 4010 -- John Locke, SECOND TREATISE (excerpt); John Milton, AREOPAGITICA; John Stuart Mill, ON LIBERTY (excerpts); Mary Ann Glendon, RIGHTS TALK (excerpts)

Learning Objectives: [Sample for Interdisciplinary Honors Seminar taken in conjunction with POSC 4370] -- Student will study a selection of classical and contemporary readings on civil liberties and draw connections between these theoretical treatments and the cases studied in POSC 4370.

Topical Outline: Weeks 1-4. The classical understanding of rights (Milton, Locke)
Weeks 5-8. The argument from utilitarianism (Mill)
Weeks 9-11. A modern critique of rights theory (Glendon)

Evaluation: Participation in independent study sessions with faculty member, 50%
Final reflection essay (approx. 8-10 pp.), 50%
