President’s Report
President Barker began with a report on Life in the President’s Home and shared that a class that he’s teaching this semester met at the President’s Home. President Barker gave a tour of the home and as students were leaving, one commented that he didn’t think that the President actually lived there.

President Barker then presented the Report Card. President Barker highlighted Top 20 rankings, Kiplinger’s recognition for great value, the growth in Creative Inquiry Teams. Students were recognized for building 24th Habitat for Humanity house, a national & collegiate chapter record. Study abroad experiences have increased. The retention rate is over 90% for freshman & sophomores and graduation rate at 78.3%. Dr. John Morse (CAFLS faculty member) and Mrs. Morse gave $1.25M for endowed chair in Arthropod Bio-Diversity. Trustee Chairman Bill Hendrix and Mrs. Hendrix made a $1million campaign commitment to University initiatives. Classes with fewer than 20 students increased. The Ethics Bowl Team placed second in regional competition.

President Barker provided an update on the Clemson Road Map. Clemson is now focused on the next five years. He reflected on what’s been accomplished. How are we doing? 2001 = 39, 2007=27. Compare with peer institutions. What are we truly doing? Clemson has revamped general education curriculum, added new degree programs and eliminated as many, enhanced student support, infrastructure improvements, and reviewed NSSE ratings. During this same time applications up from 11432 in 2001 to 12,257 in 2007. He reported that private gifts, research awards, alumni giving and endowments are all up. As a land grant school, Clemson has a responsibility to the whole state. The academic reputation is growing. He underscored the need for a comprehensive university wide plan.

President Barker discussed the seven students Clemson lost last semester. President Barker met with each family and, in the process, realized how important Clemson is to each of them. Clemson is the connection to the children they lost. On Christmas Day, President Barker called the students’ families to let them know we were thinking of them and we would not forget them. He also learned that ten friends had visited one family the day before Christmas to talk with that family about the son they had lost. President Barker expressed his pride in the remarkable students at Clemson.
