“FREAKONOMICS” BLOG

From 2008-2014 was a contributor to the “Freakonomics” blog, first when it was part of the New York Times’ website and continuing on when Freakonomics became an independent site. Published 78 articles (most about 50 percent longer than a typical op-ed) for the Times, and wrote 25 more after Freakonomics migrated. In this role had very broad latitude to write on any topic related to transportation. Topics included:

- Federal transportation legislation
- Oil, fuel economy, and electric cars
- Gender and travel
- Alcohol and driving
- The future of automobility worldwide
- High-speed rail
- Cities and walkability
- Taxing and pricing the auto
- Travel behavior, VMT, and the travel time budget
- Fuel subsidies in the developing world
- Autonomous vehicles
- Transit and the environment
- Public participation in the transportation planning process

FUNDED RESEARCH

|------|--|
| 2016 | Co-PI on team that won a federal Tier 1 University Transportation Center to be headquartered at Clemson, the first time Clemson has won such a center. Federal portion of the grant is expected to be approximately $8m over 5 years. Was judged the second most important contributor to the effort by the PI (Ronnie Chowdhury), and was credited with 11 percent of this achievement. Was instrumental in the writing, re-writing, and editing of this proposal. |
| 2013 | Travel behavior and food shopping among low-income auto recipients. PI, with Brian D. Taylor, Evelyn Blumenberg and Mae-Po Kwan as Co-PIs. Awarded through competitive internal grant competition at Clemson University. Approximately $3000 was secured for a pilot study. |
