Bryan Beerman, AIA, NCARB, LEED GA, teaches architecture studio at Clemson, and he is an architect and Senior Associate at LS3P. Bryan works extensively in the faith, civic, and commercial mixed-use market sectors with an emphasis on urban design, master planning development, and community-centered projects. He is passionate about using design to create a unique sense of place and improve urban environments through walkability and a thriving public realm; he brings these concepts to life through charrettes, sketching, and hand-rendering, which help to engage clients in authentic discussion about design and community.
