INTRODUCTION

This collection consists mainly of material compiled by J. C. Littlejohn for a history of Clemson College. He died before completing this project. It is a rich source of documentation on every aspect of Clemson, from information on the Calhoun and Clemson families to student life and college administration. The collection includes newspaper clippings from about 1890-1920 dealing with the establishment and early years of Clemson College. Related documentation referred to in this collection is found in the Klugh Scrapbook, Mss 64. The collection also contains some material concerning Littlejohn's role as Business Manager of Clemson College.

There are no restrictions on the use of this collection beyond those of Special Collections. This register was prepared by Curtis Morgan in 1985.

BIOGRAPHICAL NOTE

James Corcoran Littlejohn was born November 27, 1888 at Jonesville, South Carolina. He graduated from Clemson Agricultural College in 1908 with a Bachelor of Science degree in Electrical and Mechanical Engineering. He worked for the college as electrician and instructor in woodwork and engineering until he was appointed Clemson's registrar in 1910.

Littlejohn became Clemson College's Business Manager in 1926, a post he held until his retirement in 1954. He served under three Clemson presidents and witnessed the period of the college's greatest growth.

In 1952, Littlejohn was awarded an honorary Doctor of Engineering degree. He was active in the Clemson Baptist Church, the Rotary Club, the Masons, and was a member of the Phi Kappa Phi, Tau Beta Pi and Blue Key fraternities, as well as the Tiger Brotherhood and Alumni Association. He was instrumental in planning Class Reunions. He was married to Mary Poats and had two sons, James P. and Samuel M., and one daughter, Mary Katherine.

After his retirement in 1954, Littlejohn continued gathering material for a history of Clemson College. He died on January 30, 1959.

SCOPE AND CONTENT

The Littlejohn Collection was created by Littlejohn and his secretary, Mary Ritchie, as the research material for a history of Clemson College which he intended to write. As such, its organization has some of the characteristics of a narrative history. Littlejohn's writings on the history of Clemson College were supplemented by a great deal of research material which includes both printed items and some correspondence. Ritchie arranged the manuscript drafts and supplementary material into groups similar to chapters in a book which she called "volumes." Ritchie continued to gather material and annotate it until 1961. She also produced a card file which indexed the collection. This index has been revised during the processing of the collection and serves as a useful finding aid.

The collection contains material relating the history of Clemson Agricultural College from its conception by Thomas G. Clemson in the 1880's to its designation as a University under President Robert C. Edwards in the early 1960's. It includes correspondence of James Corcoran Littlejohn, Walter Merritt Riggs, Henry Hartzog, Robert Franklin Poole, Robert Cook Edwards, Rupert Fike and other individuals prominent in the history of Clemson University.

There is extensive documentation dealing with Thomas G. Clemson and his relationship with the Calhoun family; the will which established Clemson as a land-grant college and military academy; the court battles which surrounded its founding in 1889; and the growth of Clemson to the early 1960's. Prominent in the records is the role of Senator Benjamin R. Tillman, who promoted Clemson as an institution for the betterment of the farmers of South Carolina. Ritchie occasionally added clippings of little value for documenting the history of Clemson. This material has been removed and in cases where nothing remains in the folder, this fact is noted.

The collection also includes information on the college itself, its facilities and curricula. Items of particular interest include an annotated holograph copy of the Code of Ordinances drawn up by the Board of Trustees in 1900; an essay on industrial education written by Clemson's first history professor, William S. Morrison, in 1906; and a file of clippings recounting Clemson's early years as a football power. The material on Clemson College pays particular attention to the presidents, trustees, and buildings. Also of value is an extensive clippings file on the construction of the Hartwell Dam and its immediate effect on Clemson.

The collection includes various typescript drafts of parts of the narrative history of Clemson. Among these are "The Story of the Fort Hill Lands," "The Story of the Clemson Bequest" and "Mr. Clemson's Dream Becomes Reality - Almost" by Professor Charles M. McGee. Littlejohn's correspondence file sheds light on how he administered the college's finances, as well as aspects of his personal life. Finally, the papers contain an alphabetical list of faculty and prominent employees of Clemson College from 1908-1945.

An important component of the Littlejohn collection is its photographs, many of which are unique. The subjects of photos parallel the scope and content of the papers, and include candid shots of Thomas Clemson; portraits of Clemson's presidents and trustees; and photos documenting the construction and destruction of many campus buildings. The photos are in three groups. There are five ring binders, each a unit to itself. The first three binders are chronological pictorial histories of Clemson from the Calhoun and Clemson family portraits of the 1880's to photos of Littlejohn's last years in the late 1950's; the fourth binder deals with the old barracks buildings and the construction of Johnstone Hall; the last binder deals with the new Boiler Plant built in 1951. The second group of photos were removed from the papers during processing and consist primarily of miscellaneous campus views. The third group are oversize photos mainly of Clemson's early years.

These photos are described in a card file with: a subject index which lists every photo in the collection; and a numerical file which identifies each photo by number and includes subject description, provenance and location. The numbering system consists of the Manuscript Collection Number (68) followed by the catalog number of the photo. The binders are numbered first, followed by the loose photos, and then the oversize material.
