INTRODUCTION

General Information

The US Senate Committee on the Judiciary is one of the Senate's original standing committees and was first authorized on December 10, 1816. The Committee has one of the broadest jurisdictions in the Senate, ranging from criminal justice to antitrust and intellectual property law. Senator Dudley Chase, of Vermont, became the first Chairman of the Committee on December 13, 1816. The longest sitting chairman, before limits were established, was Senator James O. Eastland, of Mississippi, serving over the span of 22 years from 1956 through 1978. Senator Strom Thurmond served as Chairman from January 5, 1981 until December 22, 1987, and was a member of the Committee from January 10, 1967 until November 22, 2002. He vacated his Senate seat January 3, 2003.

The Judiciary Committee has legislative jurisdiction over the following areas: Apportionment of Representatives; Bankruptcy; Civil liberties; Constitutional amendments; Federal courts & judges; Governmental information; Holidays & celebrations; Immigration & naturalization; Interstate compacts, generally; Judicial proceedings, civil, criminal, & generally; Local courts in the territories & possessions; Measures relating to claims against the United States; Mutiny, espionage, & counterfeiting; National penitentiaries; Patent Office; Patents, copyrights, & trademarks; Protection of trade & commerce against unlawful restraints & monopolies; Revision & codification of the statutes of the United States; and State and territorial boundary lines. And administers them through the following subcommittees: Administrative Oversight and the Courts; Antitrust, Competition Policy and Consumer Rights; The Constitution, Civil Rights and Property Rights; Crime, Corrections and Victims' Rights; Immigration, Border Security and Citizenship; and Terrorism, Technology and Homeland Security. Supreme Court justices, court of appeals judges, and district court judges are nominated by the President and confirmed by the United States Senate, as stated in the Constitution. The names of potential nominees often are recommended by senators or sometimes members of the House who are of the President's political party. The Senate Judiciary Committee typically conducts confirmation hearings for each nominee. Article III of the Constitution states that these judicial officers are appointed for a life term. The federal Judiciary, the Judicial Conference of the United States, and the Administrative Office of the US Courts play no role in the nomination and confirmation process.

Court of appeals and district court judgeships are created by legislation that must be enacted by Congress. New judgeships were created in December 1990, under Public Law 101-650, which established 11 new court of appeals and 74 new district court judgeships. In 1999, nine additional District Court (Article III) judgeships were created, and under the appropriations bill for FY2001 the creation of 10 new district courts were authorized. The Judicial Conference (through its Judicial Resources Committee) surveys the judgeship needs of the courts every other year. A threshold for the number of weighted filings per judgeship is the key factor in determining when an additional judgeship will be requested. Other factors may include geography, number of senior judges, and mix of cases. The Judicial Conference presents its judgeship recommendations to Congress.

A US Bankruptcy judge is a judicial officer of the US district court who is appointed by the majority of judges of the US court of appeals to exercise jurisdiction over Bankruptcy matters. The number of Bankruptcy judges is determined by Congress. The Judicial Conference of the United States is required to submit recommendations from time to time regarding the number of Bankruptcy judges needed. Bankruptcy judges are appointed for 14-year terms. Chief Judge William Thurmond Bishop, of the South Carolina Bankruptcy Court, is Senator Thurmond's nephew.

There are 13 judicial circuits, each with a court of appeals. The smallest court is the First Circuit with six judgeships, and the largest court is the Ninth Circuit, with 28 judgeships. A list of the states that compose each circuit is set forth in Title 28 of the US Code, Section 41. The number of judgeships in each circuit is set forth in Title 28 of the US Code, Section 44.

There are 89 districts in the 50 states, which are listed with their divisions in Title 28 of the US Code, Sections 81-144. District courts also exist in Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, the District of Columbia, Guam, and the Northern Mariana Islands. In total there are 94 US district courts. Some states, such as Alaska, are composed of a single judicial district. Others, such as California, are composed of multiple judicial districts. The number of judgeships allotted to each district is set forth in Title 28 of the US Code, Section 133.

A US magistrate judge is a judicial officer of the district court and is appointed by majority vote of the active district judges of the court to exercise jurisdiction over matters assigned by statute as well as those delegated by the district judges. The number of magistrate judge positions is determined by the Judicial Conference of the United States, based on recommendations of the respective district courts, the judicial councils of the circuits, and the Director of the Administrative Office of the US Courts. A full-time magistrate judge serves a term of eight years. Duties assigned to magistrate judges by district court judges may vary considerably from court to court.

Scope and Content

The US Senate Committee on the Judiciary Records are arranged chronologically by Congress and Session and alphabetically by topic. Each topic is subsequently arranged again by topic or by the name of a person. Senator Thurmond began his service on the Judiciary Committee January 10, 1967, which was the 1st Session of the 90th Congress. His last day of service on the Judiciary Committee was November 22, 2002, which was the 2nd Session of the 107th Congress. However, Senator Thurmond's Judiciary Committee Records include information from January 7, 1959, which was the 1st Session of the 86th Congress, through November 22, 2002. Hence, Senator Thurmond's Judiciary Committee Records comprise forty-three years of Judiciary Committee activity.

Supplemental Information

Senator Thurmond Served on Three Major US Senate Committees, these include:

Armed Services (1959-2003)

By the time Senator Thurmond became chairman of the Armed Services Committee in the 104th Congress (1995), he was, like Senators Richard G. Russell and John C. Stennis before him, a much-revered and esteemed figure in the Senate. He was the only Senator who had been a member of the committee when the Republicans last controlled both houses of Congress in 1955. He was also the last link to the earliest years of the committee-the last Senator who served on the Senate Armed Services Committee through most of the Russell Era (1955-1968) and all of the Stennis Era (1969-1980).

Appointed to the committee in 1959, the year Senator Russell created the requirement for annual authorization, Senator Thurmond watched the authorization process evolve for 34 years and understood that enactment of the defense authorization bill and the power of the Armed Services Committee had become one and the same. Senator Thurmond's staff filed some of the committee's papers with the Committee and some with Senator Thurmond's office, which eventually came to Clemson; the Special Preparedness Investigating Subcommittee Series, although a separate series, is part of these records. Senator Thurmond chaired the Armed Services Committee from 1995 to 1999.

Judiciary (1967-2003)

All Judiciary Committee papers came to Clemson through various accessions, however, the papers covering the years when Senator Thurmond was Chairman were sent back to the Senate Archivist in 2003 for delivery to the National Archives and Records Administration (NARA) for processing, with the agreement that these records would be microfilmed and a copy presented to Clemson. The remainder of these records, covering the years mentioned above as well as some from when he was chairman, are here at Clemson University. Senator Thurmond Chaired this Committee from 1981 to 1987.

Veterans Affairs (1971-2003)

As with papers of the Armed Services Committee, Senator Thurmond's staff filed the some of this Committee's papers with the Committee and some with Senator Thurmond's office, which again eventually came to Clemson. Other exceptions may be found in various years of Correspondence Series under Veterans and/or Veterans' Affairs. Senator Thurmond was named Chairman Emeritus of this Committee in 2001.
