Charles E. Daniel, the founder of Daniel Construction Company, was a Clemson Life Trustee from 1949 until 1964. He received an honorary doctorate from Clemson in 1951. His widow, Homoezel, continued the family's support for Clemson with her own generous benevolence.

Charles E. Daniel 1895 - 1964
Homoezel Mickel Daniel 1903 - 1997
Charles E. Daniel co-founded Daniel Construction Corporation, which, at one time, was the largest construction company in the world. To honor Homozel’s parents, the Daniels created endowments to fund scholarships and fellowships in the College of Architecture, Arts and Humanities, and an endowed chair position in the School of Architecture.

Created endowments to support scholarships and fellowships and to endow the Homer Curtis Mickel and Leola Carter Mickel Chair in Architecture

Charles E. Daniel co-founded Daniel Construction Corporation, which, at one time, was the largest construction company in the world. To honor Homozel’s parents, the Daniels created endowments to fund scholarships and fellowships in the College of Architecture, Arts and Humanities, and an endowed chair position in the School of Architecture.